

Dr. Edward F. Knab

Dr. Edward Knab's 30 year professional career has been focused on the expansion of global supply chains and global markets. He spent 20 years developing global supply chain solutions for the hardware, office products, and office furniture industries. Dr. Knab launched several independent businesses during his career which included ownership of a third-party logistics company, a foreign trade zone, and several global consulting organizations. Over the last seven years he has focused his attention on helping companies improve their productivity through improved process management and leadership. Currently, Dr. Knab is an assistant professor at Embry-Riddle Aeronautics University and works closely with the Center of Aviation and Aerospace Leadership (CAAL).